Yankee Permaculture has revived its journal, TIPS (The International Permaculture Solutions Journal). Vol. 2, 100 pages of tight copy and illustrations with no advertisements, is expected to be available by the end of the year. We designed TIPS II mainly as a pdf file on CD, though we will print a small number of paper copies, but at higher price, for those who cannot use CDs.

PREPUBLICATION DISCOUNT

We are offering a prepublication discounted price of $20 per CD, valid until Dec. 1 unless extended. We may not ship prepublication copies with nice graphics on the CD, but they will otherwise be identical to our commercial run that will be available slightly later. P&H is $5 in the US, $10 elsewhere, or the order may be combined with other purchases from the Yankee Permaculture Order Form, for savings of P&H.

CONTENTS AND AUTHORS

In addition to TIPS II, the CD will contain some extras, including information on our online course and a database of information valuable to permaculturists. It will also include a full set of the Permaculture Design Course pamphlets, available separately as a free download from our web site.

This issue features more than 2-dozen articles and dozens of illustrations, with sections of Permaculture Basics, Patterning In Permaculture, Useful Plants, Urban Permaculture and a special treatment of 20 pages on humanure composting (Technology Section). Authors include Joe Jenkins, Robert Waldrop, Dan Hemenway, Thelma Snell, Noboru Motohashi, Richard Webb, and Lonna Natchigal (graphics article).

PREVIEW

See the cover, masthead and Contents page, attached. The contents may vary slightly, as we may slightly change one article and add another.

The International Permaculture Solutions Journal

ISSN: 1046-8366

The International Permaculture Solutions (TIPS) Journal is a sporadic publication of Yankee Permaculture TIPS addresses SOLUTIONS to today's environmental problems

Permaculture is a solutions-oriented approach to simultaneously restore health to Mother Earth and provide abundance for people. In permaculture, we learn to apply design principles learned from Nature and to tap into design strategies Nature has adopted in the place where we live. The result, when applied with care and patience over time, is the reintegration of people with their environment.

TIPS provides tools, inspiration and discussion of the permaculture design process, including the philosophical, ethical and pragmatic aspects of permaculture. We encourage people of divergent views to share their here.

Volunteers

Except for the services of the post office and printer, volunteers execute all aspects of this publication. We always need new volunteers to supplement the work of those who contribute and to replace folks who move on to other projects. Always needed are digital typists, artists, order fillers, and skilled proofreaders. Fundraisers, marketing workers, publicists and others of similar inclination are badly needed. We depend upon volunteer researchers to unearth valuable information from libraries so we can reEarth it

We always welcome articles, typed double spaced or, preferably, on CD. High quality, pertinent, and informative graphics are always in short supply.

To volunteer, contact Robert Waldrop, Managing Editor, at bwaldrop@cox.net

With this issue, TIPS Journal begins primary publication on computer CD. We will also print a small number of paper copies for folks who prefer this format. Individual articles may be purchased on CD or, on a custom basis, hard copy.

Subscriptions to TIPS are based on a volume. Each volume contains the equivalent of 100 pages in the print (hard copy) version. Those pages contain little or no advertising. Even our own projects usually have to advertise outside the main body of the journal.

We will accept advertisements for a separate section of the CD version, only. They will not appear with articles. We reserve the right to reject any advertisement without cause. Advertisements must be of informative value to our readers in our judgment.

A full volume of TIPS journal may be licensed on CD or purchased as a paper copy at somewhat higher cost. (Issues Nos. 1 & 3 of Vol. remain in print on paper at the original price.) CDs will contain additional information about our courses, advertisements, and other extras. Black and white offprints may be purchased at $2 per page plus postage. Rates subject to change. Advertisements are $1/page for color offprints. Prices of popular articles may be lower.

Because we are a grass roots effort, we request donations so that we may provide copies free of charge to workers in regions where US exchange is difficult or impossible to obtain.
